I use the following method for the database update. public void updateDataset(String dataset, long rowId) { ContentValues values = new ContentValues(); values.put(DATASET, dataset); database.update(DATABASE_TABLE, values, DATABASE_ROWID + "=" + rowId, null); } When I try to run this, I get an error stating that the query is not valid. I'm not sure if I'm making the update command correctly or if I need to execute something else. I've been trying to look at this online but haven't found the answer. EDIT: Here is the error I am getting: 05-09 20:46:53.700: W/System.err(16483): android.database.sqlite.SQLiteException: no such table: 0:, while compiling: SELECT ID, DATASET, ROWID, DATABASE_ROWID FROM 0 A: The answer to this was that I needed to use the database.update method as opposed to database.update which takes an SQL statement. I was just updating a row instead of updating the entire database. A: You forgot to add where clause. What's happening is the SQLiteDatabase.update() method is trying to find a row with the given rowId, and your WHERE clause does not match any rows with the given rowId. It should be as follows: database.update(DAT
