One of my absolute favorite games lately is My World of Conan - where you are a back-up for Conan the Barbarian who has to fix the dark and wacky world he lives in. As a web developer and serious amateur photographer, I found the version of Photoshop I use on my work computer a little too slow than the speed of web pages I'm editing. So I decided to investigate web-based Photoshop alternatives. I didn't think Photoshop as a web app would work. I had a preconceived idea of what Photoshop might look like, but I was pleasantly surprised. It really looks like Photoshop. Whats more, when you make some changes to your web photo, it updates in the page very quickly, like with all properly HTML-ed pages. The web Photoshop page has the same feel and workflow as Photoshop itself. And for those who expect a web only Photoshop app to be like Photoshop, I found the whole web experience to be like lightning fast and very responsive. I didn't need to use any plug-ins to make it work and I've had no issues navigating the interface. All in all, I couldn't recommend Photoshop for web use enough. Adobe Photoshop proves the Internet can do more than pictures! Use it to create fantastic websites, animations, advertisements, cartoons, illustrations...and more! Whether you're a professional or a hobbyist, you can edit photos and even create power-full designs for the web. Create stunning imagery, animation and more!
